(Questions and Scriptures for further study)

1. Child rearing is a difficult and rewarding task. Share the greatest parenting insight that you have heard. How have you seen this insight in action? Did the application of this insight produce good results? Were there times you observed that it didn't bring good results? Why?

2. It's true that we tend to get what we model. Below are some verses that address things that we'd all like to find in the next generation – but need to be modeled on a consistently in our own life first. Read and identify the traits.

Psalm 119:15-16

Romans 12:12

Romans 12:14

Romans 12:17

Romans 12:21

Colossians 3:13

Philippians 2:3-4

Any other traits you would suggest? Any of these missing in the current generation of children and youth? If so, Why? Think about the “why”.

3. Since modeling is a powerful tool for influencing the next generation, what are we teaching them about our priorities? Our character? Our faith? How are we doing with modeling the traits we identified in the Scriptures above? What one step will you take to better model priorities/character/faith?
4. Words are powerful . . . for good and bad. What do the following verses teach us about the power of our words in the context of parenting?

James 3:3-5	Proverbs 15:23
Proverbs 18:23	Ephesians 4:29
Proverbs 3:27
5. How has the improper use of words affected us? How is it affecting our children? What one step will you take to more positively use your words?

Appointment with God – Prayer Focus

Oh, how I [we] love Your law! (Psalm 119:97) Love is complex! It is rooted in knowledge, exercised in willful decisions, and experienced in our affections. To love God is to love His word. It is His means to speak to us. Pray that we love His word more each day!
